Janitza's Approach to Reducing Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Janitza develops energy meters and solutions for optimized energy use. This role entails a special responsibility for climate protection. The company has therefore been actively reducing its carbon footprint for many years, taking into account all greenhouse gases as defined by the Kyoto Protocol.

As early as 2021, Janitza set a clear goal: to significantly reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 2030. To this end, the company worked with a partner to determine its Corporate Carbon Footprint (CCF) – the complete CO2 footprint across all three scopes as defined by the Greenhouse Gas Protocol (GHG). Even while conducting this assessment, Janitza implemented its first reduction measures. For emissions that could not be directly avoided, the company supported certified climate protection projects.

In 2023, Janitza thus reached an important milestone on the path to achieving its own climate goal. Its partner, ClimatePartner, confirmed this progress and issued the "ClimatePartner-Certified Company" certificate.

Through the ongoing implementation of reduction measures and annual reporting, the company aims to continuously reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Based on the insights gained so far, Janitza has been able to further refine the goal it set for itself in 2021:

"Our goal is to significantly reduce our greenhouse gas emissions by 2030, primarily through efficiency and reduction measures. In addition, we support certified climate protection projects as part of our climate strategy," says Managing Director Alexander Veidt.

Transparent information on key steps and measures is provided via the Janitza website and the ClimatePartner ID website. A Product Carbon Footprint is not currently available.
